

UNGLAUB ENDS LIFE

Wife Fears to Disarm Man Bent on Suicide.

BROODS OVER ILL HEALTH

Fireman on Pennsylvania Railroad Decides He Will Never Again Be Able to Work—Frightens Wife Away with Revolver He Turns on Himself—Came from Baltimore.

With his wife afraid to disarm him for fear he would turn the weapon against her, W. S. Unglaub, a railroad fireman, committed suicide at his home, 123 Hickman street southeast, shortly after 11 o'clock yesterday morning by shooting himself through the heart.

Unglaub was despondent over his continued ill health and feared that he would never again be able to engage in any active work.

He was hurried to the Providence Hospital, but died shortly after arriving there. For several years Unglaub had been employed as a fireman on different branches of the Pennsylvania Railroad. He formerly lived with his father, Philip Unglaub, at 207 East Preston street, Baltimore, but for the past three years had resided on Hickman street.

Had Been Ill for Months.

Unglaub had been in poor health for several months and for the past week or so had been unable to do any work. He kept to his home during the time, and, fearing that he would never recover, he became despondent and melancholy.

According to the story of the affair which Mrs. Unglaub, his wife, told Capt. Matthews of the Fifth precinct, who was summoned to the house immediately following the shooting, Unglaub remained in his room almost the entire forenoon yesterday, and complained that he was feeling bad. About 11 o'clock he came down to the dining-room, where his wife was busy with some work, and appeared to be brooding over his condition.

Mrs. Unglaub tried to cheer him up, and when he returned to his room after a few minutes' talk, she accompanied him. On reaching his room, Unglaub went to a bureau, and, opening one of the drawers, took out a revolver. Mrs. Unglaub became frightened, and tried her best to get the weapon from his possession. The man refused to listen to her pleadings, and, stretching at full length on his bed, pointed the weapon at his breast.

Fearful to Disarm Him.

Mrs. Unglaub told Capt. Matthews she was afraid her husband would turn the weapon upon her if she attempted to snatch it from his grasp, and, hurrying out of the room, she ran to the lower floor to call help. She had just reached the dining-room when she heard the report of the revolver, and upon retracing her steps she found Unglaub lying on the bed, bleeding from a wound just over his heart.

A policeman in the neighborhood sent in a call to the station house. Capt. Matthews and several members of his command rushed to the house, and the wounded man, who by that time was unconscious from the loss of blood, was placed in the patrol wagon and hurried to the emergency ward of the Providence Hospital, only a few blocks away.

Yesterday afternoon the body was removed to a head undertaking establishment and prepared for burial. A certificate of death from suicide was rendered by the acting coroner.

Unglaub is survived by a wife and a child three months of age. The body will probably be taken to Baltimore for burial.

WANT GALBRAITH OUSTED.

Army and Navy Union Delegates Decide to Appeal.

At a meeting of the delegation which represented the local Army and Navy garrisons at the recent national convention held last evening in the office of William Hickey, of the juvenile court, it was decided that the local organization will go even as far as appealing to the President, who is a member of the order, in their efforts to annul the appointment of Robert C. Galbraith as District of Columbia corps commander of the Army and Navy Union.

There were twenty-one men present, having been delegated by the Gen. William F. Barry, Gen. Guy V. Henry, Admiral D. B. Hoxley, and Col. Roosevelt garrisons to formulate a plan for protest against the appointment in question.

Various poets have refused to acknowledge Galbraith officially, having adjourned meetings when it was known he was to appear. Objection is made to the contention that there is no constitutional provision for such an office and that the senior garrisons in the District were "ignored" by National Commander Browne, of Baltimore, who should have pointed a local committee to take the initiative in drawing up an appeal to the national commander and in turn to the national executive council, and, if need be, to every garrison of the order in the United States, in opposition to the appointment.

"We are 700 strong," said one member of the meeting, "soldiers, sailors, and seamen, and we have decided to have a voice in the selection of a commander." "Personally, we have nothing against Mr. Galbraith, but we have a department commander without any defined duties, and we have yet to receive orders from the national commander defining the Department of the District of Columbia." We support the organization by our per capita tax and dues, and we will stand to the last for a man of our selection."

ANSWERS HIS CRITICS.

HON. HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND, President of the Board of Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

WHAT HE REALLY SAID

District who care more for sentiment than for substance, and gives others who would like to take advantage of the outward conditions which the restoration of the suffrage would inevitably produce. But the people of the District of Columbia generally believe that they have the best form of government possible for them, and if any serious attempt were made to change it it would be overwhelmingly defeated. They know that the absence of partisan politics in the District of Columbia has made its government purely a matter of business, and that it has been carried on with absolute honesty, with commendable efficiency and economy, and in accordance with its official motto, "Fidelity to the People."

This unique government would not have continued, and would not have been successful, had it not been, in fact, more responsive to public opinion than any other in North or South America. Self-government of the most direct and effective character is the possession of the people of the District of Columbia. The President has always chosen as Commissioners men whose character and abilities gave them the support of their fellow-citizens, and the Commissioners and Congress have always welcomed every expression of the public opinion that has been made in the District of Columbia. The government of the District of Columbia is, therefore, admittedly the best in the United States, because it is a government by the best citizens, with partisan politics, the professional politician, and the municipal jobber absolutely eliminated.

Example of Partisan Methods.

It is interesting that advocates of the introduction of partisan politics in the affairs of the District of Columbia, which would have the same damaging effect here as in other cities, should furnish in these misquotations an example of the partisan methods which obtain in political cities and which might, if we had the suffrage here, replace to a considerable extent the characteristic Washington frankness and honesty in discussing public questions and public men.

SEP. 21, 1907. HENRY B. F. MACFARLAND.

VANDAL CUTS UP HARNESS.

Also Turns Loose Two Horses Owned by Hyattsville Man.

When Bernard Brady went into his stable at Hyattsville yesterday morning to feed his two horses, he ran into a scene of desolation and destruction that appeared to have been wrought by a cyclone. The two horses were gone and two full sets of harness were cut up into small bits and scattered all over the stable floor. There was other damage, but the loss of his two horses and the annihilation of two sets of harness was all of the injury of which Brady had heart to take an inventory.

Brady immediately recalled some letters written to him in red ink, threatening to "get even," which, he says, he received from a man named Samuel Mitchell. So he went before Justice of the Peace Bahler and swore out warrants for the arrest of Mitchell, charging him with the theft of his two horses and with the destruction of two sets of harness.

Mitchell was located in Washington last evening, and was taken into custody by the police. He spent the night at No. 9 precinct, and will be taken to Hyattsville this morning by Deputy Sheriff Vincent.

During the day one of Brady's horses came ambling back. The other animal has not yet been located.

At a meeting of the District of Columbia Protective Association, held at 221 Sixth street northwest, on last Friday evening, resolutions calling for various radical reforms in the government of the District were adopted, including a demand for the resignation of the health officer and denouncing the compulsory vaccination law.

The mission of the District of Columbia Protective Association, as set forth by its president, J. Frazer Richard, is "to stand between the helpless people, men, women, and children, who are oppressed by local men and policies of any kind whatsoever."

At the meeting Friday night R. S. Tharin opened the proceedings with an address on the evils of taxation with no address or representation. He was followed by J. W. Nigh in a speech in which he presented from official records the argument that typhoid fever in the District was traceable to the Potomac River water, and not to the city wells, whose closing by order of the Commissioners recently was so vigorously combated by the association.

A. B. Bradford, of Kensington, Md., in an impassioned address of fifteen minutes' duration, portrayed the evils resulting from vaccination, compulsory or voluntary, and declared that he would not under any circumstances permit his children "to be so polluted," and, if necessary, would send them to be educated in West Virginia, "where no such inhuman law existed."

Washingtonians Hurt in an Early Morning Smash.

REACH HERE ON A SPECIAL

Accident Occurs Near Ryan's Sliding, in Virginia—Cars Derailed, Turn Turtle, and Take Fire—No One Is Killed, Although the Conductor Is Seriously Injured by a Fall.

Numerous friends and relatives yesterday afternoon greeted the special train which brought to this city the passengers of the Washington and Chattanooga Limited on the Southern Railway, which was wrecked at Ryan's Sliding, about thirty miles north of Lynchburg, Va., about daybreak yesterday morning.

There were about a hundred in the party, many of whom were Washingtonians. Although all suffered slight injuries when the train was derailed and crashed against a steep embankment, Conductor Smith, of Alexandria, was the only one who received hurts regarded as serious. About thirty received bruises and cuts from flying glass, but, after treatment by the several physicians who hurried to the scene of the disaster, they were able to continue their journey on the special train. Among the Washington passengers was Police Lieut. Edward J. Keefe, of the Third precinct.

"The wreck happened about 5 o'clock in the morning," said the lieutenant last evening, when telling of the crash-up, "when the train was going at full speed through a deep cut. Although as yet nothing definite can be ascertained, a broken rail is given as the cause of the accident."

Coaches Turn Over.

"When the defective rail gave way the train was wrenched in such a way as to break the coupling between the baggage car and the first Pullman. The rear end of the train was thrown to one side, and in leaving the tracks crashed into a steep embankment about thirty feet high, turning over so that the coaches lay almost on their sides, imbedded in the soft soil of the embankment.

"The front part of the train, although the baggage car had been derailed, was dragged on for about 100 feet, stopping just in time to avoid being hurled down an abrupt embankment that flanked the tracks on both sides.

"Hurled from their berths and seats by the violent impact against the embankment, the passengers were thrown into the greatest confusion. The entire line of coaches was in absolute darkness, the gas lamps having been extinguished by the destruction of the supply pipes.

Scramble for Doors.

"A wild scramble for the openings at either end of the coaches ensued, and many were trampled upon. Several crawled through the windows, which by the angle the coaches took when hurled into the bank were above them, and then jumped to the ground. Others made their way over the masses of broken seats and luggage to the doors at either end of the coaches and thus got out into the open.

"Within a few minutes after the crash the foremost Pullman caught fire, and in a short time was a mass of flames. The members of the train crew, who hurriedly extricated themselves from the wreckage, assisted the frightened passengers to points of safety and did all in their power to save what small baggage could be secured. When the flames came in contact with gas tanks that furnished the illumination, causing the fire to spread even more.

"The two Pullmans and one passenger coach were soon in flames, and before assistance could be secured were completely demolished.

"A heavy rain started about half an hour after the wreck, and the passengers were forced to take cover in the baggage car, which, although derailed and on its side, had not been broken apart.

Relief Is Sent For.

"The news of the disaster was telegraphed in all directions, and a wrecking train, carrying hose and other firefighting apparatus from the local fire department, was started out from Lynchburg. The train also brought several physicians, and immediately efforts were made to attend to those who had been injured."

Lieut. Keefe was accompanying his daughter, Miss Nellie Keefe, from Knoxville, Tenn. Lieut. Keefe became separated from his daughter when the crash occurred, and only after the greatest difficulty found her jammed under one of the seats. Lieut. Keefe received numerous bruises, but his daughter escaped uninjured.

Other Washingtonians who were slightly injured were: G. W. Parker, United States Geological Survey, who suffered contusions and abrasions of right wrist and left foot. Mr. Parker was one of the men appointed by the President to investigate the coal conditions during the anthracite coal strike.

Burdette Kecker, 1015 B street, left forearm injured. Mrs. C. W. Naden, 617 H street southeast, abrasion and contusion of arms and hands.

Others Who Were Hurt.

Among others who were injured were: B. F. Turner, baggage-master, 16 King street, Alexandria, Va. Abrasion of arms, contusion of left shoulder, and neck strained.

Mrs. H. W. Dickinson and baby twenty-one months old, of Bristol, Tenn., destined for Washington. Hand abrasions. Conductor Smith, of Alexandria, formerly of Charlottesville, was the worst hurt. When the train suddenly stopped he was thrown violently to the roof of the car, and in falling hit upon the back of his head. He was badly bruised, and it is thought that he is injured internally. He was taken to Charlottesville and removed to the hospital at the University of Virginia.

BULLET MAY PROVE FATAL.

Police Say Kendrick's Brother Admits Firing the Shot.

George Kendrick, who was taken to the Casualty Hospital on Saturday night, suffering from a bullet wound over the heart, was reported as being in a very serious condition late last night, and is not expected to live. The physicians state that Kendrick has but a slight chance for recovery.

William Kendrick, the brother of the injured man, who is charged with having done the shooting, is being held at the Fifth precinct station. Yesterday morning, the police say, he admitted he had done the shooting, but refused to add anything to this statement.

Yesterday the police succeeded in finding the revolver with which William Kendrick is alleged to have done the shooting. Immediately following the affair on Saturday night it was thought he had hidden the weapon somewhere in his home, 415 L street southwest, but yesterday it was found at George Kendrick's house, 100 Fourth street, in front of which the shooting took place. The police have learned that William Kendrick purchased the weapon on Saturday before returning to his home in the afternoon.

A. G. M. PROVOST DEAD.

Former Post-office Department Employee Succumbs to Old Age.

A. G. M. Provost, who until his retirement several years ago was an employee of the Post-office Department, died at his home, 1421 T street northwest, last night of a complication of diseases incident to old age. Mr. Provost, who was eighty-six years of age, was at one time a bridge constructor, and during the civil war had charge of the army horses stationed at Gleason. He is survived by a daughter, A. Provost, and two daughters, Mrs. Ellen R. Whitaker and Mrs. Mary Hubbard.

Funeral services will be held at the house Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The remains will be taken to Frenchtown, N. J., his former home, for interment.

LINER IS LATE; NO SERMON.

Bishop Brent Unable to Preach to West Point Cadets.

New York, Sept. 22.—The Right Rev. Charles H. Brent, Protestant Episcopal bishop in the Philippines, arrived to-day on the steamship Umbria. He was accompanied by Rev. Thatcher R. Kimball and a Filipino boy. The Umbria was delayed by severe weather.

Bishop Brent was to have preached this morning to the cadets at West Point, and, finding that the Umbria would be late, the Episcopal Church Mission telegraphed to Washington, asking for permission to take him off the steamer at Quarantine. Somehow or other the orders went astray, and the bishop had to remain on the boat until she reached her dock, at 8 o'clock this morning.

There is no train on Sunday morning that reaches West Point in time for service, and the bishop went to Albany, where he will be the guest of Dean Talbot, of All Saints.

The Filipino boy has come here to be educated. He is twelve years old, and comes from Bontoc, which is in the mountains about 300 miles from Manila. He was baptized by Missionary Clapp, who gave him the name Hillary Clapp. His Filipino name is Pipa-Pipp. He is to go to school at Port Hope, Ontario.
